Maison Gerard, New York, will host an exhibition, titled 'A Lifetime of Passion and Expression', featuring the works of renowned sculptor, architect, and philosopher Marino di Teana (1920-2012), on view from July 22 through August 26, 2017.

Presented within the landscaped gardens of a Grosvenor Atterbury mansion owned by Michael Bruno (founder of 1stdibs and Art-Design-Carta), the exhibition marks the gallery's first off-site presentation, featuring 18 sculptures created by the artist over three decades. The artist garnered widespread adulation since the 1960s for his monumental public commissions and his architectural sculptures, the two forms that became one under his practice, as he used industrial materials like steel, making his sculptures as complete as architectural structures. The works in the exhibition, made of corten and stainless steel, and with their range of scale from small to monumental, render the show a unique status.

The exhibition will be on view at beautifully landscaped gardens of historic Grosvenor Atterbury Mansion in Southampton, NY.
