Oceanco unveiled its new 377-foot yacht on opening day of the Dubai International Boat Show. Lobanov Design Studio, BMT Nigel Gee, and interior designer Achille Salvagni collaboratively created the Tuhura superyacht.

Tuhura got its name from its unique exterior design reminiscent of early canoes used by indigenous people. This simple construction is reminiscent of the primordial senses of exploration and discovery.

“Our Tuhura is a simple idea. The thought was to take a natural shape similar to those seen in the earliest canoe-type crafts and augment it multifold to a larger scale, using modern technology.”—Igor Lobanov, Lobanov Design Studio founder.

East Asia and the Pacific Islands inspired Tuhura’s interior design. The yacht is adorned with gunmetal and natural bronze details and tatami floors—complementing the exterior’s simplicity.

The simple canoe form allows for good seakeeping and maneuverability, while the yacht's advanced technology systems create a great experience for pioneering.

“Tuhura is a megayacht conceived for a dynamic owner, nevertheless the timeless sense of peace and calmness are the main characteristics. This softness and dynamicity are reflected in the humble elegance and sensuality of the primitive organic shapes echoed throughout.”—Achille Salvagni, interior designer.
